HAROLD B. LEE LIBRARY BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY PROVO, UTAH

INTRODUCTION.

A long experience in consulting directories convinced me that one abounding in inaccuracies, in errors of omission and commission, subjected the person who relied upon it to so many costly and vexatious annoyances, that it was not only generally useless, but often worse than none; that a directory of Manchester free from serious faults never had been, nor would or could be made by parties who are strangers to the city and totally unacquainted with its people, institutions, and business.

Investigation of the subject led me to believe that a directory which should embody the results of a careful home canvass, and be measurably free from mistakes, could be profitably furnished at half the price which our people have been compelled to pay for the one hitherto in use; and that he who furnished it, while losing nothing himself, would give employment to a number of men, and thereby contribute something toward the prosperity of the city.

These and other similar considerations led to the projection of this volume. It does not contain all the facts and statistics which I at first intended it should, and which I propose to incorporate in future ones, but it will be found much more complete and accurate than any similar work ever presented to the citizens of Manchester, and can, I think, be relied on. The work has been begun and will be continued as a Manchester enterprise, dependent upon Manchester skill and industry for its character, and upon Manchester patronage for support. It is, therefore, a subject which need not concern people outside of Manchester; but certain parties have seen fit to take a notice of its probable appearance in high dudgeon, and to provoke a comparison between it and the book which has been jerked into the city from Boston; and I take pleasure in asking all purchasers to make such comparison as minute and careful as possible. The Boston work, which is apparently made up of sections of the directories of Manchester, Lowell, and Lawrence, for years prior to 1877, and which therefore omits the names of five hundred of our citizens, and puts in their place those of people long dead and of nearly two hundred who were never heard of here, is in itself a justification of this enterprise; and if, in undertaking it, I have hurt the feelings or the business of those who have charged us $2 for a book which they now confess they can afford to sell for half that price, I cannot help it, and do not wish to. Manchester people are not accustomed to go to Boston for a license to manage their own affairs.

To all who by their patronage and courtesy have enabled me to bring the initial volume to its present state of completeness and success, I am under great obligations, which I shall seek for occasion to discharge.

The book is intended as an annual, and designed for the year in which it is issued. It may be expected on the first of each January hereafter.

JOHN B. CLARKE.

THE DIRECTORIES OF MANCHESTER.

Since commencing this work we have examined a complete file of all the directories ever published in the town and city, and as an illustration of the growth and prosperity of the city a descriptive sketch of the different books may prove of interest in this connection.

The first attempt at directory-publishing was made in the year 1845, before Manchester became a city. It was entitled the "Manchester Almanack and Directory, and Annual Advertiser," and was a small 32mo book, containing 144 pages. The publisher was S. F. Wetmore, and the book was printed in what was then the best style of the art, on a hand-press, at the "American" office. It was prefaced with a brief but interesting historical sketch of the town, which had just then commenced to make its history among the towns of the State. The book contained 3,178 names.

For some reason Mr. Wetmore did not continue the publication of the work, as the next year's directory appeared with a change of title, and with a new publisher. It was called a "Directory for the City of Manchester," the place having just been incorporated. It was issued September, 1846, and printed at the "American" office, and was published by James O. Adams, the present secretary of the New Hampshire Board of Agriculture. This was also a small 32mo of 148 pages, and contained 4,462 names, an increase of 1,284 over the previous year.

The next issue was entitled, "A Business Directory of the City of Manchester," and was published by C. A. Brown, in April, 1848, being printed at the "American" office by Mr. Adams. The page was somewhat larger than its predecessors, being a 24mo, and comprising 206 pages in all. The contiguous villages of Piscataquog and Amoskeag, being then parts of Bedford and Goffstown, respectively, but closely connected with the city by business and social interests, were canvassed and catalogued separately, as was also the village of Goffe's Falls. The number of names was as follows: In the city proper, 5,034; Piscataquog, 127; Amoskeag, 274; Goffe's Falls, 37; making a total of 5,472, an increase of 1,010 over its immediate predecessor.

The next issue appeared two years later, with still another change in publishers, and a modification of its title, which was, "The Manchester Almanac and General Business Directory, for the year 1850." It seems to have passed entirely into new hands, being published by Gage & Forsaith, and printed at the "Messenger" office. It was, in many respects, a very decided improvement over its predecessors, containing a good collection of historical and statistical matter, and a wood-cut map of the city from surveys by E. A. Straw, Esq., extending from the river east to Walnut street, and bounded north by Bridge street and south by the Valley cemetery. The number of names, however, was less by 637, Piscataquog and Amoskeag being again taken separately, the entire canvass aggregating as follows: City, 4,624; Piscataquog, 139; Amoskeag, 72; making a total of 4,835. Whether this was due to less population or a less thorough canvass, we are unable to say. The work comprised 204 pp., 24mo, and, like its predecessors, was bound in paper covers, the issues following all being in boards or muslin.

The directory for 1852 appeared with yet another new publisher, and a modification of its title, which reads as follows: "The Manchester Directory, embracing the names of the citizens; a Business Directory, an Almanac and Memorandum for 1852, with a variety of useful information." The work was published by Wm. H. Fisk, and comprised 272 pp., 24mo. It bears no imprint, but appears to have been printed partly in Boston and partly at home, as the almanac portion contains Massachusetts statistics, evidently compiled for the Boston Almanac. There is a still further falling off in names, there being 977 less than in the issue of 1850, and 1,614 less than in 1848, which must have been due to the method of canvassing, as the city was steadily growing in population. The number of names was as follows: City, 3,582; Piscataquog, 175; Amoskeag, 101; total, 3,858.

Mr. Fisk's connection with the book business enabled him to make a success of the enterprise, as his name appears as publisher of the issue of 1854, the work being entitled "The Manchester Directory and Advertiser; embracing the names of the citizens, a Business Directory, and an Almanac and Memorandum for 1854, with a variety of useful information." It was printed by Abbott, Jenks, & Co., and was a 24mo of 242 pages. Piscataquog and Amoskeag villages had been annexed the previous year, and the identity of the two places was lost in the canvass, which foots up an aggregate of 4,497 names.

The growth and importance of the city had now given it such proportions as to make the publication of the directory an assured success, and at this juncture the parties from Boston stepped in, the issue for 1856 being published by George Adams, 91 Washington street, Boston. It will be seen by the foregoing facts, that the claim of the Boston publishers of having published the directory during the time when it was not self-sustaining, is without foundation, and due credit should be given to the pioneer printers of Manchester for sustaining a directory during the earlier years of the town and city, when it was not a sufficient object for a publisher to issue two numbers in succession.

The fact concerning its transfer to Boston is, that when a Manchester publisher had demonstrated its self-sustaining character by issuing two successive numbers, then the Boston parties seized upon it and continued its publication with profit to themselves.

The issue for 1856 comprised 260 pages and contained 4,541 names. It was entitled No. 4 by its publisher, who was evidently ignorant of the fact that six numbers had been previously issued, making that No. 7 instead of No. 4. The error has been perpetuated in the succeeding issues of the Boston publishers.

The directory for 1858 was essentially like that of 1856, with the addition of a summary of general events for the two previous years, and contained 264 pp., 24mo. The number of names was 4,231, less by 310 than the previous work. The publishers were Adams, Sampson, & Co.

The book for 1860 shows an increase of 568 names over that of 1858, the number being 4,799, and contained 264 pages. After this issue, four years elapsed before another directory appeared, 1862 being one of the most exciting years of the civil war, with many of our citizens in the army, rendering the question of a directory a consideration of little importance.

In 1864 another directory appeared, published by Adams, Sampson, & Co., and containing 276 pages. It shows a decrease of 396 names in the four years, which is attributable to the fact that Manchester was well represented at the front.

In 1866 the style and size of the book were changed, and it appeared as an octavo of 224 pages, bearing the names of Sampson, Davenport, & Co., as publishers. The number of names was 5,442, an increase of 1,039 since the previous issue.

Three years later, in 1869, another octavo volume appeared, from the same publishers, containing 266 pages, and 5,912 names, an increase of only 470. The price of this book was advanced to $1.50, that of the previous issue being marked at $1.00.

In 1871, the book increased in size to 334 pages, retaining the octave size, and having 7,245 names, an increase of 1,333 over the number in the previous volume.

The issue for 1873 contained 376 pages, and 8,484 names, an increase of 1,239. The price was advanced to $2.00.

The directory for 1875 contained 346 pages, and 8,168 names, or 316 less than that of 1873. As this was the next issue after the "hard times" commenced, it may be presumed that there was little or no increase of population, with possibly a decrease.

The book for 1877 contained 364 pages, and 8,574 names, an increase of 406 names over that of 1875, and of 90 over that of 1873, showing that the temporary check which had apparently been given to the city's growth by the hard times had ceased to operate in the reduction of its population.

The present book contains 9,512 names, an increase of 938 over the directory of 1877. How much of this increase is to be attributed to the increase of population we are unable to say, as the canvass has been a most thorough one, with unusual facilities for making it complete. The work has been done by our own citizens, who were familiar with the localities assigned them, and acquainted with the best methods of acquiring the necessary information. The obstacles in the way of absolute correctness are numerous, and to a stranger more difficult to overcome than to one acquainted with the peculiarities of the people. That these have all been surmounted we do not claim, as absolute perfection in a directory is an impossibility. We believe, however, that this work will be found the most reliable one of the kind yet published.

The growth of the city during the thirty-four years in which it has been favored with directories, is amply illustrated in the books themselves, as well as by the facts which they contain, and the comparison of the little 32mo and its 3,178 names with the present volume, and its 9,512 names, is a reliable indication of the substantial progress of the city in material prosperity.

For a detailed description of the various industries which have contributed to the city's growth, and now constitute its elements of prosperity, the reader is referred to the following pages, giving a historical and descriptive account of Manchester from its beginning to the present time.

HISTORICAL AND DESCRIPTIVE.

The territory which is now the city of Manchester was for an unknown period the hunting and fishing grounds of the aboriginal savages, and its early history, within the knowledge of white men, commences with its occupancy by the Pennacook tribe, with Passaconnaway at their head.

In the year 1719, the adjacent town of Londonderry was settled by the Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, who had fled to this country for refuge from the persecutions which they were compelled to endure in the old world. was originally named Nutfield, from the abundance of its chestnut trees, and was intended to include the territory now occupied by the city of Manchester, on account of the great value of its fisheries, but in their ignorance of the locality their surveys were improperly made, and a strip of land on the bank of the Merrimack River, eight miles long and over a mile in width, was left outside of any provincial grant. This piece of land was called Harrytown, and was at that time occupied by Indian tribes, one of which, the Namaoskeags, subject to the Pennacooks, dwelt around Amoskeag Falls, where, in their season, the waters abounded in salmon, shad, alewives, and lamper-eels.

In 1722, John Goffe, jr., and his brothers-in-law, Edward Lingfield and Benjamin Kidder, men from Massachusetts who were related to the Londonderry settlers, built for themselves houses at Cohas Brook, being the first known white inhabitants within the present city. Goffe lived on the north bank of the brook, nearly opposite the falls to which he has left his name.

Eleven years later, in 1733, several families from Londonderry settled near Amoskeag Falls, for the purpose of establishing the claim of Londonderry to the locality.

These were: Archibald Stark (father of the revolutionary hero), John McNeil, and John Riddell, and their families At about the same time seven tracts of land in New Hampshire were granted to soldiers of the Narragansett war of 1675, under the name of Narragansett townships. One of these grants included the village of Amoskeag, and another what is now the village of Piscataguog. Two years later Massachusetts granted a tract of land three miles wide, extending from Suncook to Litchfield, on the east side of the Merrimack, to Major Ephraim Hildreth, John Shepley, and other soldiers who had fought the Indians in 1703, under Capt. William Tyng, in whose honor the place was named Tyngstown. This included the strip known as Harrytown, and Major Hildreth immediately built upon Cohas Brook a saw-mill, which was the first mill of any kind in Manchester.

The settlement of the controversy as to the boundary line of Massachusetts was effected in 1740, by cutting off and annexing to New Hampshire twenty-six towns which had formerly been claimed by Massachusetts, and among them was Tyngstown.

The settlers of the vicinity, being desirous of living in "town fashion," made application for a charter, and, as the territory was too small for a township, sections were taken from the adjoining towns, and at a meeting of the governor and council, September 3, 1751, a charter was granted, under the name of Derryfield, to a tract of land which comprised eighteen square miles of the south-west part of Chester, nine square miles of the north-west part of Londonderry, and eight square miles of Harrytown, thirty-five miles in all, making a township of irregular shape and various soils. The north part of Harrytown, called Henrysburg or Henrysborough, was left ungranted, but was annexed in 1792. The charter was written in the name of the king of England, George II., and signed by the governor of the province of New Hampshire, Benning Wentworth. name of Derryfield is said to have been given to the new township because the people of Derry had been accustomed to pasture their cows within it.

The first meeting of the inhabitants of the new town was held September 9, 1751, at the old Hall tavern, at what is now known as "Manchester Center," and in that vicinity the town-meetings were held for nearly a century. At that meeting were chosen five selectmen, a town-clerk, two auditors, a constable, two tithing-men, two highway surveyors, two invoice-men, two haywards, two deer-keepers, a culler of staves, and a surveyor of lumber. Between the third day of March and the twenty-second of the next February, eleven roads were laid out, of which eight were wholly or in part new.

The men of Derryfield bore a prominent part in the Seven Years' War, between the British and French, which broke out the third year after the formation of the township, the "Rangers," under command of Col. John Goffe, Capt. Robert Rogers, and Capt. John Stark, being especially noted. It is a curious fact that Col. Goffe's men, dressed in odd clothes, wearing their hair long or tied in queues, their heads protected by woolen nightcaps, suggested to Dr. Shackburg, a surgeon in the British regular army, the idea of writing, to a tune called "Nankey Doodle," which had come down from Cromwell's time, a song in derision of these nondescripts, changing "Nankey" to "Yankey," and thus originating the title of the popular air of to-day.

Following the close of the war several efforts were made to introduce preaching and a higher order of civilization, but differences of opinion led to feuds and factious quarrels, chief of which was concerning the location of the meeting-house, which was finally commenced but never finished as a meeting-house, although used for that purpose and for town meetings until the village near the falls grew up and the town-meetings were transferred to the latter place, when the old house was sold and converted into a dwelling-house. It is still standing, next to the buryingground, on the road through the Center.

In the war of the Revolution, the men of Derryfield were prominent, such being the fervor of their patriotism that the selectmen and thirty-four out of thirty-six men able to bear arms went at once to the war on hearing the news of the battle of Lexington, leaving but two at home with the old and infirm. Capt. John Stark and his men were immortalized by their victory at Bennington, for which the gallant commander was made a brigadier-general by the Continental Congress.

After the close of the war, the town made commendable progress in providing for preaching and schooling, and several school-houses were soon built.

In 1792, a corporation was formed to build a bridge across the Merrimack, which was completed in September of that year, at the foot of Bridge street, and known as McGregor's bridge.

In 1793, the Hon. Samuel Blodget, of whom it was truly said, that he was "the pioneer of internal improvements in New Hampshire," took up his residence on the east bank of the Merrimack, near Amoskeag Falls. He had been a sutler in the colonial and revolutionary wars, a judge of the court of common pleas, and a merchant with extensive business connections, and was a shrewd, far-sighted man. His first project was the building of a canal round the falls, through which might be carried to market the vast quantities of lumber that grew on the banks of the river. This was commenced in May, 1794, and, after exhausting his own private fortune and such funds as he could raise by lottery, was completed in May, 1807, only four months prior to the death of its projector, who was thus deprived of the fruits of his labors, the canal passing into the hands of the proprietors of the Middlesex canal, who reaped much advantage from it until the railroad destroyed its usefulness, and it went to decay.

March 13, 1810, when the population of the town was six hundred and fifteen, and the first mill had just been built upon the river at Amoskeag, the town chose Thomas Stickney, John G. Moor and Amos Weston a committee to petition the legislature to change the name of

and the request was complied with at the June session of that year. The new name was chosen in compliment to Judge Blodget, who had said the town would become "the Manchester of America." Mr. Weston was the father of the Hon. James A. Weston, Manchester's honored ex-mayor and ex-governor of the State.

As stated above, the first mill had just been built at Amoskeag. This was on the west bank of the river, in what was then Goffstown, and was owned by Benjamin Prichard, and Ephraim, David, and Robert Stevens, who were the nucleus of a stock company which held its first meeting

January 31, 1810, as "The Proprietors of the Amoskeag Cotton and Wool Factory," and was incorporated in June of the same year as "The Amoskeag Cotton and Woolen Manufacturing Company." Its mill was forty feet square and two stories high. There was then no picker, and the cotton was ginned in the neighborhood at four cents a pound. The machinery consisted only of spindles, and the yarns, at once the company's dividends, the officers' salaries, and the operatives' wages, were either sold as they were spun, or woven for the company by the housewives of the town.

After several changes in ownership, and some increase of facilities, the mill property and privileges came into the possession of the "Amoskeag Manufacturing Company," which was incorporated in 1831, and which purchased large tracts of land on both sides of the river, and acquired control of the immense water-power which has made Manchester what it is to-day. Although essentially a monopoly, the history of this company has been marked with a broad liberality, both as regards its lands and the use of its water-power; and by giving away or selling at low prices to actual settlers its lands, and leasing mill-sites to new corporations, it invited capitalists and built up a village, stimulating the growth already begun.

Manchester was first represented in the legislature as an independent town, unclassed with others, in 1816, Isaac Huse being chosen in March of that year as a representative.

Major-General John Stark, the hero of the Revolution, died May 8, 1822, aged nearly ninety-four years. He was buried in the presence of a large concourse of people, with military honors, in a private cemetery on the "Stark place," and the family erected over his remains a plain granite shaft.

The "Mammoth road," after much controversy and an order from the court, was built in 1834, and was designed to facilitate the travel between Concord and the towns below.

October 24, 1838, the Amoskeag Company made its first public sale of lands to men who were builders of the coming city. A few streets had already been laid out and graded, and this sale gave increased vigor to the growth of the town, several blocks and public buildings being erected soon after. The second sale occurred in October of the following year, including land bounded by Elm, Hanover, Union, and Merrimack streets, which brought higher prices than the first, owing to the rapid growth of the town.

In 1839 the town voted to establish a system of police and a board of health, and measures were taken for protection against fire. An engine-house was built on Vine street, and a fire-engine, called "Merrimack No. 1," was purchased, the first owned by the town, although the Stark Mills already had one, and another was owned by the town of Bedford and located in the village of Piscataquog, then a part of Bedford.

The first newspaper published in Manchester was established by John Caldwell, in 1839, and was entitled "The Representative." It was a weekly Democratic paper, continuing by the above title until 1842, when it was merged with "The Manchester Democrat."

The new village thus established on the river's bank soon eclipsed the old town at the Center, from which it was then separated by a dense wood, and mutual jealousy and ill-feeling naturally arose, to such a height that at the annual meeting of 1840 thirty constables had to be chosen before the business could be proceeded with. There were two sets of candidates, representing the interests of the old and new towns, and the latter carried the day and thereafter held the reins of government. At this time the population was three thousand three hundred and twenty-five.

In 1841 the first town-meeting was held in the new village, in a hall on Amherst street. During this year the town voted to accept a deed of the Valley Cemetery from the Amoskeag Company, and bought of the latter for twenty-four hundred dollars the lot on the corner of Elm and Market streets, where the city hall now stands. School-houses, churches, and other buildings were erected, new streets laid out, and the march of progress was onward. A new town-house was built, at a cost of seventeen thousand dollars, and the next year the first town-meeting was held in it.

In 1842 the town voted to build reservoirs for fire purposes, constructed several school-houses, and the Amoskeag Falls bridge, and inaugurated the custom of printing the annual reports. Several churches were built, the lyceum organized for lecture courses, "The Manchester Democrat" was established by W. H. Kimball and Joseph Kidder, and the trial trip of the Concord railway was made June 28, the road being opened to the public on the fourth of the following month.

In 1843, a strong temperance agitation induced the town to appoint a liquor agent, and instruct the selectmen to prosecute all violators of the law. The same year the town voted to fit up a "house of correction," and to build the

"Hooksett road."

In 1844, the Manchester Atheneum — the nucleus of the present city library — was organized. On the twenty-sixth of September the third land-sale of the Amoskeag Company took place, comprising the tract bounded by Elm, Merrimack, Union, and Park streets, which was sold at prices in advance of those at the previous sales. On the twelfth of August the town-house was burned, and in less than three weeks the town voted to build another on the same spot. Warned by the loss, the town built new reservoirs, enlarged the old ones, voted to buy two new fire-engines, and appointed a committee to consider the sources of water supply. Their report was, that Massabesic Lake was the only available source, but thirty years elapsed before the suggestions of the committee could be carried into effect.

The year 1845 was marked by several important events. The present city hall was built in October, at a cost of thirty-five thousand dollars. The question of sewerage and drainage was taken into consideration, a board of engineers was established, the court of common pleas was held in town for the first time, the Hon. Ira A. Eastman presiding, and two newspapers, "The Independent Democrat," and the "Saturday Messenger," were established. The former was subsequently moved to Concord, and the latter united with "The American." On the thirtieth of September of this year, occurred the fourth and last extensive land-sale of the Amoskeag Company, embracing the tract between Elm, Lowell, Union, and Orange streets. On the twentysixth of March, occurred the celebrated "Parker murder," an event which created a wide-spread sensation, the perpetrator of which is to this day unknown, although vigorous efforts were made to discover and bring to justice the author of the crime.

In 1846, a sewer was built through Elm street from Bridge to Granite, and several more roads were laid out in the compact part of the town. A committee was chosen at the annual meeting in March to petition the legislature for a city charter, and at the June session of the same year the legislature passed an act to incorporate the City of Manchester, which was accepted by the town on the first day of August, by a vote of four hundred and eighty-five yeas to one hundred and thirty-four nays. The first election occurred August 19, at which the usual city officers were elected with the exception of mayor, there being four candidates and no choice. On the first day of September, a second election for mayor was held, resulting in the choice of Hiram Brown, the Whig candidate, by twenty-four majority, in a vote of eleven hundred and fifty-four. city government was organized in the town-house, September 8, 1846, in the presence of a large concourse of people. The population at this time was 10.125.

The history of the city from its incorporation to the present time, has been marked with a rapid but healthy growth. Its latent natural resources have attracted the attention of capitalists, and the liberal spirit manifested to new-comers has drawn to its population the industrious, thriving, and public-spirited from the hills of our own State, and from neighboring States, until the population has increased in thirty-five years from less than one thousand to more than thirty thousand souls.

The various manufacturing enterprises, associations, and organizations, which unite to make up its material and social prosperity, will be noticed in detail under their appropriate headings, and the historical, descriptive, and statistical information appended will, we believe, give some idea of the city as it is at the present time.

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION of the city to-day may be interesting in this connection. Manchester lies on both sides of the Merrimack River, sixteen miles south from Concord, seventeen north from Nashua, forty-one west from Portsmouth, twenty-six northwest from Lawrence, fifty-two north-north-west from Boston. On the east is Massabesic Lake, the largest sheet of still water in the State south of Concord, through which passes the line between Manchester and Auburn. On the south are Litchfield and Londonderry, on the west Bedford and Goffstown, on the north Goffstown and Hooksett.

It was the first city incorporated in New Hampshire, is the largest and wealthiest, possesses one-tenth of the State's wealth, produces one-eighth of its manufactured goods, and is the fourth city in the United States in the value of its cotton and woolen manufactures.

VILLAGES.

The city has several villages which arose from geographical circumstances, viz.: Piscataquog, Amoskeag, Manchester Center, Goffe's Falls, Bakersville, Hallsville, Janesville, Youngsville, and Towlesville. Amoskeag was named from the falls—"the place of much fish;" Piscataquog from the river — "the place of much deer;" the Center because it was the original town. Goffe's Falls was named for Col. John Goffe, Bakersville for Joseph Baker, Hallsville for Joseph B. Hall, Janesville for Mrs. Jane Southwark, Towlesville for Hiram Towle, and Youngsville for the Youngs who dwelt there. Several of these villages have nearly lost their identity by being merged in the city proper in its expansive growth, this being especially true of Hallsville, Towlesville and Janesville. Amoskeag and Piscataguog each have their stores and hotels, and are thriving villages. Goffe's Falls is situated on Cohas Brook, the outlet of Massabesic Lake, whose waters supply power for hosiery, crash, and cassimere mills. It is a station on the Concord railroad.

STREETS.

Manchester's center of population and business is nearly half way from its northern and southern limits, and on the east side of the Merrimack, along the east bank of which are stretched its manufactories, their canals running parallel with the river, and bordered by the track of the Concord railway, and a street of sixty feet in width which belongs to the corporations. Forty or fifty rods to the east of this and parallel with it, at an elevation of ninety feet from the surface of the river, extends the city's main thoroughfare, called Elm Street, two miles and a half long, paved in part with granite blocks, bordered with brick or concrete sidewalks, and shaded with trees. It was laid out as a public highway by the selectmen of the town on the fifth of May, 1840, one hundred feet wide, twelve feet on each side for sidewalks, and ten feet in the center for ornamental trees. The streets are laid out to cross each other at right angles, running nearly north and south and east and west.

SQUARES.

There are five public commons in the heart of the city, gifts from the Amoskeag Company, in addition to the private squares which surround its own blocks and those of other corporations. These commons are known as Merrimack, Concord, Tremont, Hanover, and Park squares. The largest of these commons is Merrimack, containing five and seven-eighths acres, bounded by Elm, Merrimack, Chestnut, and Central streets. It is surrounded by a substantial iron fence, and has, on its northern side, a large pond, supplied by a culvert leading to it from Hanover square. Near the center is located the soldiers' monument. Concord square is bounded by Concord, Vine, Amherst, and Pine streets, is intersected by Chestnut street, and contains four and five-eighths acres. It is surrounded by a stone edging, has numerous shade trees, and a small pond of water near its center, fed from the Hanover-square pond. Hanover square is bounded by Union, Amherst, Beech, and Hanover streets, and contains four acres. It has a large pond, supplied by the waters of Mile brook, and is well supplied with shade trees. Tremont square is situated between Pine, Bridge, Union, and High streets, and contains two and a half acres. Some of the original forest trees yet remain upon it. Park square, situated between Chestnut, Park, Pine, and Cedar streets, contains three and a half acres, is very level, without water, and partially shaded.

CEMETERIES.

The city owns two large cemeteries, the older of which, known as the "Valley," is now almost within the compact part of the city, although in 1840, when given to the town by the Amoskeag Company, it was considered far out from the village. It contains nineteen and seven-tenths acres, and is bounded by Auburn, Pine, Valley, and Willow streets.

It is irregularly divided by a gorge through which flows the Cemetery brook, and is a spot of much natural beauty, to which art has lent additional adornment.

Pine Grove Cemetery comprises a tract of about forty acres, two and a half miles south of the city hall, between the Calef road and the River road. This was acquired by purchase, and both cemeteries are under the charge of a committee, annually elected by the city councils.

There are also the old burying-ground at the Center; one at Goffe's Falls; one in Amoskeag; one in Piscataquog; one near Bedford line, occupied by the Roman Catholics; one near the school-house at Harvey's mills, known as the "Merrill cemetery;" one in the eastern part of the city, known as "Stowell's ground;" the "Ray cemetery," on the River road near Amoskeag Falls; the "Forest cemetery" on the old Weston farm in the southeastern part of the city; and a small yard in the north part of the city. Some of the above are private, and all, except the Catholic burial-place, are but little used.

BRIDGES.

The first bridge of any importance within the limits of Manchester was built across Cohas Brook, on the road leading from the Center to Londonderry, in 1738, at private expense. The first bridge over the Merrimack was built in 1792, at the foot of Bridge street, by a corporation and was known as McGregor's bridge. This went to ruin about 1815, and was replaced in 1825 by another. years later it was bought by the Amoskeag Company and the toll on foot-passengers abolished. A freshet carried off two piers in 1848, but these were replaced, and the bridge remained till 1851, when it was entirely swept away, and has not been rebuilt. Granite bridge was built in 1840, by a company at what was then known as "Merrill's Falls," on the Merrimack. Eight years later the toll was abolished, and the bridge became the property of Manchester and Bedford. The ice-freshet of 1851 carried it off, and the present one was built by the two towns that year, and, on the annexation of Piscataguog, passed entirely into the hands of Manchester. A bridge was built in 1842 over the Merrimack at Amoskeag Falls, by a corporation. It was made a free bridge in 1852, and carried away by a freshet in March of the next year. The city rebuilt it in Several bridges were built over the Piscataquog River in early days by the town of Bedford. A wooden one, built in 1843 by that town, was burned in 1862, and immediately replaced by an iron one by the city, Piscataquog village having been annexed to Manchester in 1853. This bridge fell in 1873, under a loaded team, and the present wooden one was built in its place. When the Concord railroad was built in 1842, a single track bridge was built across the Merrimack at Goffe's Falls. This was enlarged in 1869 to a double-track bridge, without at all interrupting the trains. The bridge over the Merrimack on the Manchester and North Weare railroad, built in 1850, was burned in 1871 and a new one was constructed that year. The Amoskeag Company has a bridge of its own across the Merrimack, connecting its yards on either side of the river.

WATER-WORKS.

As early as 1844, the question of a system of waterworks received the attention of the citizens, and after several ineffectual efforts to induce private individuals to engage in the enterprise in the capacity of a stock company, the city councils, in 1871, asked authority of the state legislature to undertake the construction of waterworks, which was granted by an act of June 30, 1871, and ratified by an ordinance passed by the councils on the first day of August. This act authorized the expenditure of a sum not exceeding six hundred thousand dollars for the construction of the necessary works, which were to be in charge of a board of seven commissioners, of which the mayor is an ex-officio member. After extended preliminary surveys, and much discussion, Massabesic Lake was finally fixed upon as the source of supply; and the work of construction was commenced in July, 1872, under the superintendence of Col. J. T. Fanning, who was appointed chief engineer. A substantial dam was built across the outlet of the lake at Cohas Brook, a suitable canal and penstock constructed, leading the water to the pumping-station, where it turns the wheels and feeds the pumps which drive it through the force-main, seven thousand feet long and twenty inches in diameter, to the reservoir at Manchester Center. This basin has a capacity of sixteen million gallons, is one hundred and fifty-two feet above Elm street at the city hall, one hundred and eighty-eight feet above the level of Canal street at the passenger-station, and one hundred and thirteen feet above the level of the pumps which supply it.

The pumps are worked by two turbine wheels, and are double acting, forcing the water toward the reservoir with both up and down strokes. They can be run at a maximum speed of thirty strokes a minute, at which rate each pair will deliver one thousand nine hundred and eighty gallons a minute, or two million eight hundred and fifty-one thousand two hundred gallons in twenty-four hours. This would supply sixty gallons a day to each individual in a a population of forty-seven thousand five hundred persons. Both pairs of pumps will together deliver a quantity sufficient for a supply of sixty gallons daily for each individual of ninety thousand people. The total cost of construction, as given in the last report of the commissioners, was somewhat over seven hundred thousand dollars, the excess over the original six hundred thousand being authorized by a subsequent act of the legislature.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

The government of the city is vested in a mayor, eight aldermen, one from each ward, and twenty-four members of the common council, three from each ward, all elected biennially by the people on the next Tuesday following the first Monday in November. The mayor is chairman of the board of mayor and aldermen, and the city clerk is the clerk of the board. The common council chooses a presiding officer from its members, and appoints a clerk. Assessors are elected, one from each ward, who together constitute a board. Each ward also elects one inspector of checklists, and one overseer of the poor, and one moderator, one ward clerk, and three selectmen for the transaction of ward The city councils in convention elect the city clerk, city treasurer, city solicitor, city physician, city messenger, superintendent of the city farm and keeper of house of correction, superintendents of highways, and several minor officers. The board of mayor and aldermen appoints a collector of taxes and a city liquor agent, and the mayor appoints three health officers.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

In 1839 the town voted to buy a fire engine and necessary apparatus: To this single engine others were added from time to time, until eight or ten engine and hose companies were under the city's control, when the first steam fire engine was bought in 1859. This was also the first one made by the Amoskeag Company, whose engines have since gained a world-wide celebrity. This invention wrought a revolution in the fire department, and as more steamers were added the hand machines were withdrawn and the membership diminished, until the department at present is composed of two steam fire engines, three hose carriages, and one hook-and-ladder truck, the whole manned by about ninety-five men, under the supervision of a board of engineers, consisting of a chief and four assistants. The following is the organization of the department, as it exists at present: -

The department uses ten thousand feet of hose, and the total value of its apparatus is not far from forty thousand dollars.

FIRE-ALARM TELEGRAPH.

This valuable adjunct to the fire department was constructed in 1872, and comprises about twenty miles of wire, traversing the compact part of the city, and reaching to Amoskeag and Piscataquog villages, Hallsville and Bakersville. There are thirty-four alarm boxes, whose keys are kept at adjacent houses or stores, and five strikers, situated on the city hall, the Lincoln-street and Ash-street schoolhouses, the engine-house in Piscataquog village, and a tower at the north end of the city. There are also gongs at the engine-houses and the residences of the engineers and others. The following is the

SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

The first schools in town were held in private houses, and the first vote of the town in favor of education was in 1781, when it was voted to hire a school-master for nine months of the year. In 1783 the selectmen originated the school-district system, which continued in use eighty-five years, the first division being into four districts. The first teacher whose name has been preserved was Jonathan Rand. In 1868 the city assumed control of the schools as a whole, abolishing the district system, and grading the schools more carefully than before. The value of school property now owned by the city is estimated at $278,075. The following is the organization of the school department for 1879: —

HIGH SCHOOL. - BEECH STREET.

This school was first kept in the old building now standing on the corner of Lowell and Chestnut streets. The house was erected in 1841, at a cost of three thousand dollars, and was used for a district school, with David P. Perkins as the first master. Some five or six years later it was changed to a high school, and in 1867 it was moved to its present location on Beech street, the new building having been erected to meet the demand for better accommodations for the school. The value of the house and lot is about forty-five thousand dollars. The following is a list of the names and residences of the teachers:—

Principal, Albert W. Bacheler, 726 Beech street.

Assistants, Herbert W. Lull, 97 Bridge street.

Lucretia E. Manahan, 38 Walnut street.

Emma J. Ela, 508 Chestnut street.

Mary A. Buzzell, 85 Middle street.

INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL. -- LOWELL STREET.

This was organized as an ungraded school, to afford instruction to those who were unable to maintain a regular standing with the classes in the graded school. It was kept in halls and various places until January, 1854, when it was removed to the brick building on Manchester street, built for its use at a cost of about eight thousand dollars. In 1874 it was removed to the old high-school building on Lowell street. It is at present suspended.

TRAINING SCHOOL. - MERRIMACK STREET.

This school was instituted for educating in the science of teaching, and young ladies who graduate from the high school may enter this as assistants, and teach under the direction of the regular teachers, themselves becoming pupils in the science of instruction.

HIGHER DEPARTMENT.

Principal, Nancy S. Bunton, 116 Pearl street.

Assistant, Mintie C. Edgerly, 193 Laurel street.

PRIMARY DEPARTMENT.

Principal, Martha N. Mason, 585 Beech street.

SPRING-STREET GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

This school was begun in 1848, in the brick building on Spring street, and was then called the North grammar school. Moses T. Brown was its first principal. The grammar department is now consolidated with that of the Franklin-street school, and both are under Mr. Sherburne as principal. The assistants at Spring street are:—

Mary L. Sleeper, 271 Pine street. Anna O. Heath, 39 Ash street.

FRANKLIN-STREET GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

This school, formerly called the South grammar school, was originally kept in a chapel on Concord street, from which it was moved in 1847 to the brick building on Park street, built for its use. Ten years later it was transferred to its present location on the corner of Franklin and Pleasant streets. This building and lot are valued at eighteen thousand dollars.

Principal, Edward P. Sherburne, 246 Central street.
Assistants, Annette McDoel, 272 Laurel street.
Lottie R. Adams, 362 Hanover street.
Carrie E. Reid, 135 Myrtle street.

LINCOLN-STREET GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Under the name of the East grammar, this school was begun in 1867 in the new high-school house, with two divisions, gathered from the North and South grammar schools. In the fall of 1868 another division was added, and in the spring of 1869 it was moved to the old high-school building, where a first division was added, and a master appointed. In 1871 a new house was built for its accommodation on the corner of Lincoln and Merrimack streets, worth fifty thousand dollars, where it is now located.

Principal, Benjamin F. Dame, 328 Merrimack street.
Assistants, Julia A. Baker, 178 Lowell street.
Mary J. Fife, 307 Merrimack street.
Isabelle R. Daniels, 584 Beech street.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

To afford some educational facilities to those who are unable to attend the day schools, but are eager to acquire knowledge, a system of evening schools has been instituted for the winter months, and has proved a great boon to many who would otherwise be deprived of all school privileges. The first school of this character was held in the winter of 1854, but was not resumed until 1868, since which time the plan has been in successful operation, increasing in interest yearly. The schools are held at the old high-school house on Lowell street, and at the Center-street house in Piscataquog.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

Beside the regular public schools of the city, there are several schools supported by the Roman Catholic population. The teachers are principally nuns, from the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy. The largest school is on Park street, in the brick building owned by the city and formerly occupied by the South grammar school. Its principal is Thomas Corcoran, assisted by several of the sisters. There are also schools on the corner of Lowell and Birch streets, corner of Union and Laurel streets, and parochial schools connected with the Catholic churches, numbering in all a daily attendance of about fourteen hundred pupils.

Mount St. Mary's Academy, at the convent, corner of Union and Laurel streets, is an institution where the higher branches are taught, but it has also a primary department connected. The Mother Superior is M. Frances Xavier Warde, and the number of pupils is about one hundred and fifty. There is also connected with the convent an Orphan Asylum, on the corner of Hanover and Pine streets, in charge of the sisters. Catholic evening schools are also maintained for those employed during the day.

CHURCHES.

The early religious history of Manchester indicates that its services of worship were infrequent and spasmodic. The Indian fishermen at the Falls were sometimes taught by the Rev. John Eliot, and afterwards by Simon Betogkom, an Indian convert. When the whites were attracted to the place for fishing purposes, religious services were sometimes held on Sunday, and as early as 1743 Rev. Mr. Seccomb, of Kingston, who came to the Falls to fish, used to preach to the people on Sundays. In 1753, the Rev. Alexander McDowell was invited by the town to preach, but there is no record of his acceptance. In 1758 a meeting-house was begun, but factious quarrels prevented its completion, and it nearly went to decay. It was used for town-meeting purposes, but was never furnished with pews.

The first church organized in town was in 1812, and was the result of preaching by David Abbott, a Baptist, and was a Baptist church of fourteen members. It flourished for some years, but finally dissolved. Preaching was maintained at irregular intervals by the various denominations for a number of years, but the first church that became a permanency was the Congregational, organized at Amoskeag village, December 2, 1828. A Presbyterian church had been organized at Manchester Center a few months previous, and the growth of the new village on the east bank of the river made a union of the two churches desirable, which was effected August 15, 1839, and a house of worship was erected the same year. Cyrus W. Wallace, a licentiate, was supplying the pulpit, and soon received a call to settle as pastor. He was ordained January 8, 1840, and was the first minister ever ordained and settled in the town.

THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL SOCIETY

was organized at Amoskeag village, where it was at first proposed to build a church, but it was finally decided to build on Hanover street, as above noted. In 1852 the house was enlarged, the congregation meanwhile worshiping in the city hall. The property is now estimated to be worth about eighteen thousand dollars. The following is the present organization:—

Pastor, Rev. Edward G. Selden. Deacons, John P. Newell, S. S. Marden, Horace Pettee, Peter K. Chandler, Leonard French, Taylor S. Swett. President, Horace Pettee. Clerk of Church, J. D. Patterson. Secretary and Treasurer of Society, Joseph B. Sawyer. Superintendent of Sabbath-school and Organist, E. T. Baldwin. Sexton, Calvin D. Carpenter.

FRANKLIN-STREET SOCIETY.

Immediately following the organization of the first Congregational society, and at the close of the same meeting, the advisability of a second society was discussed, and May 7, 1844, a constitution was adopted and signed by sixteen persons. On the twenty-seventh of June, of the same year, a church was organized in connection with the society. The first pastor was Henry M. Dexter, who was ordained Nov. 6, 1844. They worshiped in the town hall until its destruction by fire, then in a chapel on Concord street, and a hall in Patten's block, then in the new town hall until the completion of their present house of worship on Franklin street. April 25, 1860, the name was changed from Second Congregational to Franklin-street society. The church building was remodeled in 1878, at an expense of about $18,000, and the seating capacity increased to 1,400. A tower was added, in which has been placed a chime of nine bells, weighing 7,500 pounds, the gift of ex-Governor Smyth. The following is the organization: —

Pastor, Rev. Wm. V. W. Davis. Deacons, A. H. Daniels, F. B. Eaton, Ira Barr, George Murdough, William G. Everett, M. R. Currier, H. B. Gould. Clerk of Church, A. H. Daniels. Treasurer of Society, James A. Weston. President of Society, Frederick Smyth. Directors, George W. Riddle, F. B. Eaton, Ira Barr. Clerk of Society, William G. Everett. Superintendent of Sabbath-school, Isaac W. Smith. Organist, F. W. Batchelder. Sexton, I. G. Rowell.

FIRST BAPTIST SOCIETY.

As previously stated, the Baptists were the first denomination to organize a church in town, but on its disorganization those of that faith were content to worship with other denominations until 1835, when a company of ten persons were recognized, on the twenty-sixth of July, by the Baptist Church in Goffstown, as the "Amoskeag branch" of the aforesaid church. January 4, 1837, they were recognized as an independent church, and held their first meeting as such in a private house the next day. In 1840 a brick building was erected on the corner of Manchester and Chestnut streets, and was occupied until July 8, 1870, when it was destroyed by fire. Steps were taken for the erection of a new church, which was erected on the corner of Concord and Union streets, at a cost of $60,000. The following is the organization:—

Pastor, Rev. W. H. Leavell. Deacons, Charles W. Cheney, James J. McIntosh, James Baldwin, John S. Folsom, J. A. V. Smith, Frederick A. Hawley. Clerk, George B. Kendrick. Superintendent of Sunday-school, Henry H. Huse. Chorister, Hamilton French. Sexton, J. I. Whittemore.

MERRIMACK-STREET BAPTIST CHURCH.

This church was an outgrowth from the First Baptist Church, and was organized October 31, 1845, and publicly recognized by council, December 3 of the same year, as the Second Baptist Church. The first pastor was the Rev. A. Meetings were held in Classic hall and Temple T. Foss. hall, Patten's block, then in the chapel on Central street, then in the city hall until the completion of the brick church on the corner of Elm and Pleasant streets, which they occupied for the first time February 22, 1849, and in 1853 they adopted the name of Elm-street Baptist Church. Disagreeing with the builders concerning the purchase of the house, they left in February, 1857, and worshiped in Smyth's hall and the city hall until the completion of their present house of worship, October 27 of that year. The house cost about $7,000. The following is the organization: -

Pastor, Rev. A. Sherwin. Deacons, Caleb Gage, Calvin Boynton, George Holbrook. Treasurer, A. B. Roberts. Superintendent of Sabbath-school, Rev. A. Sherwin. Clerk, George Holbrook. Sexton, Henry I. Caswell.

PINE-STREET FREEWILL BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Freewill Baptists held meetings in Manchester as early as the year 1838, and a society was formed in 1839.

They built a house of worship in 1842, at the corner of Merrimack and Chestnut streets, which they exchanged in the fall of 1859 for the church on the corner of Merrimack and Pine streets, previously occupied by the Unitarians. A separation took place in the society, and a large portion of the members left, and organized in 1860 as the Elm-street Freewill Baptist Church. A council was called and the remaining members were re-organized as the Pine-street Freewill Baptist Church. The present officers are as follows:—

Pastor, Rev. J. J. Hall. Church Clerk, John A. F. McKinnon. Clerk and Treasurer of the Society, H. B. Sawyer. Deacons, J. B. Daniels, F. P. Smith, H. B. Sawyer, Silas Hamilton. Superintendent of Sabbath-school, H. B. Sawyer. Sexton, Henry F. Hunt.

MERRIMACK-STREET FREE BAPTIST CHURCH.

The members of the First Freewill Baptist Church who left and formed a new church, commenced worship in the old brick church on the corner of Elm and Pleasant streets. After some vicissitudes, they finally purchased the former house of worship on the corner of Merrimack and Chestnut streets, which they now occupy. The organization is as follows:—

Pastor, Rev. George M. Park. Deacons, B. J. Robinson, Joseph Peabody, Joseph W. Bean. Treasurer and Clerk of Church, G. S. Holmes. Treasurer of Society, Will C. Morse. Supt. Sabbath-school, Benjamin J. Robinson. Clerk of Society, Nathan A. Robinson.

FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL SOCIETY.

The Methodists were the first to own a meeting-house in the original town of Manchester, having built one in 1829 at the Center. As the manufacturing interest developed, near the river, a new center of business and population, a second church was formed there, but the first has always maintained a visible existence, and is at present organized as follows:—

Pastor, Rev. George C. Noyes. Supt. Sabbath-school, Albert J. Peasley. Sexton, William B. French.

ST. PAUL'S METHODIST EPISCOPAL SOCIETY.

The Second Methodist Episcopal Church was organized December 16, 1839, and the next June built a chapel on the corner of Hanover and Chestnut streets. In 1843 they sold it to the Unitarians, who moved it to the corner of Pine and Merrimack streets. They built the brick church on Elm street, and on removing to it changed the name to the Elmstreet Methodist Church. Their present title was conferred by the conference in 1862. Their present organization is as follows:—

Pastor, Rev. George W. Norris. Treasurer, Hilas Dickey. Supt. Sabbath-school, Joseph A. Foster. Clerk, Silas C. Clatur. Sexton, Joseph A. Foster.

TABERNACLE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

This church sprung from the St. Paul's in 1875, and had for its first pastor the Rev. J. Benson Hamilton, who preached three years, a portion of the time in Music hall, and the remainder in Smyth's hall. They now worship in Music hall, under the following organization:—

Pastor, Rev. Lyman E. Gordon. Class Leaders, T. B. Foster, C. J. Chase. Trustees, Thomas B. Foster, Carlos C. Babbit, W. H. Gould, John W. Clement, Abner J. Sanborn. Stewards, Joel Lund, James Lightbody, O. J. Brooks, J. W. Clement, Charles J. Chase, Warren H. Gould, G. W. Gordon. Supt. Sabbath-school, James Lightbody. Treasurer, Abner J. Sanborn.

GRACE CHURCH .- EPISCOPAL.

Episcopal services were held in the months of June and July, 1841, in the old high-school house on Lowell street, and resumed in October in a hall in Union building. In November a church was organized, and for a time the services were held in a chapel on Concord street. A church of wood was built and consecrated December 28, 1843, on the lot now occupied by the stone edifice which was consecrated December 4, 1860. The following is a list of officers:—

Rector, Rev. Lorenzo Sears. Wardens, Wm. B. Webster, Benjamin C. Dean. Treasurer, John Campbell. Clerk, C. B. Bradley. Sexton, Oscar F. Bartlett.

UNITARIAN SOCIETY.

Unitarianism was first preached in this city in March, 1841, and services were continued about four months, then suspended, and resumed in March, 1842, on the completion of the town hall. The first pastor of the society was Oliver H. Wellington, who was ordained July 19, 1842. Their first house of worship was a small chapel, leased of the Methodists and removed to the corner of Pine and Merrimack streets. In 1859 they exchanged houses with the Freewill Baptists, and removed to the corner of Merrimack and Chestnut streets; and in 1872 they dedicated their present house of worship, on the corner of Concord and Beech streets. The house and lot are valued at $40,000.

Pastor, Rev. Henry Powers. President, George B. Chandler. Clerk and Treasurer, H. Frank Morse. Directors, Andrew Bunton, Lewis Simons, James B. Straw, Benjamin G. Cumner. Organist, Miss Mary Spofford, Sexton, R. O. Burleigh.

UNIVERSALIST SOCIETY.

The first organization of Universalists was effected September 4, 1833, although preaching was commenced in 1825, at Amoskeag village. In 1839 the society removed to the east side of the river, and erected the brick building on Lowell street still occupied by them. It was enlarged in 1850, and remodeled in 1878, the latter change costing about $7,000.

Pastor, Rev. L. F. McKinney. Deacons, N. E. Morrill, Horace Stearns, J. B. McCrillis, A. P. Drake. President, Alexander H. Downs. Clerk, Jeremiah D. Jones. Treasurer, Hiram Hill. Sexton, J. W. Hayden.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

A society was organized October 19, 1870, under the name of the First Christian Society of Manchester, and in January of the next year they adopted a constitution and a church was formed. Rev. O. J. Hancock was the first pastor, and was settled August 6, 1871. The society worshiped in the city hall until the erection of Post-office block, when they leased a hall in the upper story, which they now occupy.

Pastor, Rev. E. C. Abbott. Deacons, James H. Nutt, Charles E. Hatch. Treasurer and Clerk, Wm. H. Cate. Sextons, Charles W. Goodwin, Nathaniel Piper.

SECOND-ADVENT SOCIETY.

Believers in the doctrine of the "second advent" have held meetings in the city since 1843, worshiping in halls, without settled pastors, or any church organization to hold property. They now occupy Martin's hall, corner of Elm and Lowell streets, and are supplied by itinerant preachers.

CITY MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

In the spring of 1847, the Rev. J. L. Seymour was employed by individuals to work as a home missionary, and in 1850 the Manchester City Missionary Society was organized, and the same year a building was erected on the corner of Merrimack and Beech streets, to be used as a free church. The office of city missionary is now held by Mr. P. K. Chandler, and the duties consist largely of the dispensation of charity to the poor. His office is at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, on Hanover street. A Sunday-school is held at the church, of which H. W. Herrick is superintendent, and preaching services are held occasionally.

MAIN-STREET CHURCH. - PISCATAQUOG.

House of worship erected November, 1820, by the Presbyterians, and used by them for religious services until 1842, when it was sold, to be used as an academy. In 1855 it was occupied by the Wesleyan Methodists, and in 1856 again by the Presbyterians. In 1867 the church was disbanded, and in 1870 it was given to Mrs. Mary P. Harris, who repaired it and put it into the hands of the Young Men's Christian Association, in whose charge it still remains, the pulpit being supplied occasionally by the city clergy, and a Sunday-school maintained, under the superintendence of George A. Hanscom.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

In July, 1844, the Rev. William McDonald came to Manchester to assume the spiritual charge of the six hundred Roman Catholics in the city. They commenced worship in Granite hall, and four years later began the erection of a church on the south-east corner of Union and Merrimack streets, which, after a short season of use, was pronounced unsafe, and had to be rebuilt. With the increase of numbers, a demand arose for another church, which was built on the corner of Lowell and Pine streets. The French Catholics also have a house of worship. The following gives the organization of the various Catholic churches:—

St. Ann's Catholic Church.—Union street, corner Merrimack. Brick house, erected 1850, which, together with the parsonage, is valued at sixty thousand dollars. Priest, Rev. William McDonald; Assistant, Rev. John McSweeney; Organist, Walter Dignam; Sexton, Thomas Corcoran.

NEWSPAPERS.

The first newspaper published in Manchester was the "Representative," established October 18, 1839, since which time a large number of journalistic ventures have been made, religious, political, and literary, with varying success. Some of them issued a few numbers and then expired, others survived months, or years, and still others, with changes in name and ownership, survive to this day. The following are published regularly at the present time:—

DAILY MIRROR AND AMERICAN.

No. 64 Hanover street, Post-office block. Established as the "Daily Mirror," October 28, 1850, by Joseph C. Emerson. In February, 1852, John B. Clarke became editor, and in October of the same year sole proprietor. In 1863 he bought the "Daily American," and united it with the "Mirror," combining the two titles in one, which the paper retains to the present. It publishes three editions, noon and evening, and the subscription price is $6.00 per year.

WEEKLY MIRROR AND FARMER.

Established February 22, 1851, as the "Dollar Weekly Mirror," by Mr. Emerson, and purchased by Mr. Clarke when the daily came into his possession. In 1863, it absorbed the weekly "American" and the "New Hampshire Journal of Agriculture," and the paper was then published under the name of "Dollar Weekly Mirror and Journal of Agriculture," which was changed July 1, 1865, to that of "Mirror and Farmer." It is published at No. 64 Hanover street, Post-office block, John B. Clarke editor and proprietor. Terms, $1.00 per year.

UNION DEMOCRAT.

Office 15 Manchester street, near Elm. Established January 24, 1851, by William H. Gilmore & Co. In June, the firm became Campbell & Gilmore, and in 1861 the name of the paper was changed to "Weekly Union," with Campbell & Harriman as publishers. In 1863, Thomas P. Pierce took Mr. Harriman's place, and the title "Union Democrat" was resumed. January 1, 1864, the firm became Campbell & Co., and August 1 of the same year, Campbell & Hanscom. The paper is published weekly at $1.50 per year.

MANUFACTURES.

The history of the manufacturing interests of Manchester is almost coeval with that of the city itself. They are the source of its vitality, having raised it from the level of a mere fishing resort to its present position of commercial importance and thriving activity.

From a small beginning, on the west side of the river, where yarn was spun, the cotton having been previously cleansed by hand in the neighboring families, the business has progressed until the corporations of the city employ nine thousand persons, and have a monthly pay-roll of three hundred and eleven thousand dollars. They use every year twenty-six thousand and one hundred tons of coal, eight thousand cords of wood, and about thirty million feet of gas. The mills have about three hundred thousand spindles, and make one hundred and forty-three miles of cloth a day.

Closely identified with the interests of the city have been the growth and prosperity of the

AMOSKEAG MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

In July, 1831, the legislature of the State passed, and five men accepted, an act authorizing the formation of a company bearing the above name. There were then a few small buildings which had been used for manufacturing purposes, but the mighty power of the Merrimack River was yet to be developed, and its latent strength utilized by the ingenuity of man to create, enrich, and adorn a future city. Absorbing several lesser companies which had commenced operations along the river, the young and vigorous corporation went straight to its work. They purchased fifteen hundred acres of land on the east side of the river, built a new dam, constructed canals, erected mills, leased and sold water privileges and mill-sites to other corporations, and laid out the site of a town, building tenement and boarding houses for their own operatives, and selling large tracts of land to new settlers. The liberal policy which has marked its course from its beginning until the present time has been attended with deserved prosperity, and there are probably few corporations in America to-day whose history presents so few reverses as does that of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company. During the war of the rebellion, a portion of their works was converted into an armory, and forty thousand stands of arms were made for the government. Their steam fire engines have a reputation the world over, and their tickings, sheetings, and other cloth manufactures are in every market. The page of statistics will give some idea of the present resources of the company and its workings. (See page 295.)

STARK MILLS.

This corporation was chartered in 1838, with a capital of five hundred thousand dollars, and commenced operations immediately. In 1845 the capital was increased to seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, in 1846 to one million, and in 1847 to one million two hundred and fifty thousand. They own fourteen acres of land, occupied for mills, boarding-house and overseers' blocks, etc. The goods manufactured are cotton and linen, the latter product being in the form of crash and toweling, while the cotton goods are sheetings, drillings, duck, and bags, the latter being widely known as the "seamless bags," being woven in one piece. They make a specialty of heavy goods, requiring a proportionately large amount of raw material. The present agent at the Mills is Phinehas Adams, under whose excellent management the market value of the stock has increased about fifty per cent. The appended statistical page illustrates the operations of the corporation, and gives its business organization. (See page 296.)

MANCHESTER MILLS.

This corporation was organized in 1839, with a capital of a million dollars, for the manufacture of dress goods. The Amoskeag Company had previously made the fabric for delaines in their mill at Hooksett, but the printing was done elsewhere. Mr. Straw went to Europe in 1844, to acquire the necessary information to enable the company to print the delaines, and in 1845 the first mill was erected, which went into operation the next year. In 1847 the property was sold to a corporation which was chartered the previous year, with a capital of one and a half million dollars, under the name of the Merrimack Mills, which was afterward changed to Manchester Print-Works, and its capital increased to eighteen hundred thousand dollars. 1873 it was re-incorporated, under the name of the Manchester Print-Works and Mills, with a capital of two million dollars, and in 1874 the name was changed to the Manchester Mills.

The corporation owns about forty-three acres of land in all, a portion of which is on the west side of the river. It has six mills, and leases forty mill-powers of the Amoskeag Company. The goods manufactured are principally worsted dress goods and prints, and many of its employes are skilled artisans from the old world, who have brought with them the knowledge acquired by years of study and experiment.

The manufacturing and printing departments are owned by the same corporation, but their workings are illustrated separately, on the two statistical pages given herewith. (See pp. 298, 299.)

LANGDON MILLS.

This corporation was chartered in 1857, and organized in 1860. Its capital stock was two hundred thousand dollars, which was subsequently increased to five hundred thousand. It has two mills, one of which was formerly used as a paper-mill, the other having been built in 1868 by the company. The corporation is successfully and prudently managed, and its goods find a ready market, comprising the finer grades of shirtings and sheetings. The statistical page given herewith illustrates the extent and importance of its operations. (See page 297.)

NAMASKE MILLS.

In 1856 a corporation was organized as the Amoskeag Duck and Bag Mills, and ten years later the name was changed to Namaske Mills. In 1875 the property passed into the hands of the Amoskeag Company, by whom it is now managed, Mr. William B. Webster being the superintendent. The goods manufactured are principally ginghams and shirting flannels.

DERRY MILLS.

This corporation was organized in 1865, with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars. Mr. S. R. Payson is now proprietor, and George F. Lincoln the agent. The property comprises three mills, on the Cohas brook, at Goffe's Falls, and the following shows their average production:—

No. 1 Mill
Production per week	900 dozen
No. 2 Mill	Chinchillas
No. of Woolen Cards	7 sets

Production per day of Dress Goods	1.500 vards

MANCHESTER LOCOMOTIVE WORKS.

Started in 1853 as a private enterprise, incorporated the next year with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars.

The shops are situated on Canal street, between Hollis and Dean, with a foundry at the south end of Elm street. The company manufactures locomotives, and the celebrated Amoskeag steam fire engine and hose carriages. Its officers and practical working are illustrated below:—

and knew this Poland was a good Baptist preacher, and thought I would try the medicine. To make a long story short, I have been using Poland's Humon Doctor for nearly a year, taking eleven bottles in all, and am now as free from humors as any man in the world. My skin is smooth and soft, my cough has left me, my appetite is good, and I am a well man. I have tried all other kinds of humor remedies, but the Humon Doctor cured me, and is the only one that ever did me any good. (Signed) AMOS AMBROSE, JR."

The above testimonial is in keeping with the experience of all that have used it. Rev. J. W. Poland, the discoverer of the invaluable remedy, is a Baptist clergyman of the strictest integrity, but who, for a long time, was obliged to quit preaching to save his own life. He devoted years to the study of medicine, and found out how to make his own life comfortable, and compounded what is known all over the country as Poland's Humon Doctor, the greatest remedy the world ever saw for scrofula and all kinds of humors. Price $1 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists.
